

IAN'S FRIENDS FOUNDATION INAUGURAL

WhatIFF Symposium

FOR PEDIATRIC BRAIN TUMOR RESEARCH

SEPTEMBER 15-16, 2017

ATLANTA, GEORGIA

This September, Ian's Friends Foundation will host its first ever "WhatIFF Symposium" for pediatric brain tumor research.

Over 60 of the top clinicians and researchers in the pediatric neurology field have been invited to participate.

Ian's Friends Foundation's goal is to cure pediatric brain tumors/cancer NOW, and the current funding mechanisms appear too slow to get us to that goal in real-time. We are hoping to break down research barriers and support ideas and collaborations that otherwise may be considered too risky, in order to accelerate our objective of finding new treatments and cures for pediatric brain tumors.

This meeting will be a two-day "shark tank style" symposium. We are looking for innovative therapeutic methodologies and treatments for pediatric brain tumors. Ideas should be truly "out of the box", potentially "paradigm changing", and scientifically sound, but which may not be traditionally funded through NIH mechanisms due to risk, concept, or lack of adequate preliminary data. Cross-institutional collaborative ideas or teams within institutions are also encouraged.

We hope you will consider being part of this exciting new initiative to help support pediatric brain tumor research.

Please contact Amy Kane, IFF Executive Director at amy@iansfriendsfoundation.com for more information. Thank you for your consideration!
